

Food and Allergy Policy for Kerem Shalom

Food has always played a central role in Judaism; we use food for communal sharing and celebration. While we want to continue this tradition, for an increasing population, this communal sharing has become life threatening and/or a road block to participating in our community when food items contain unhealthy or commonly allergenic ingredients.

In accordance with the Judaic principal, “Kol Yisrael arevim ze bazeh” – we are all responsible for each other – we are adopting a food and allergy policy which shall be in effect at all events occurring at Kerem Shalom.

This policy has three goals:

- To minimize contact with allergens
- To provide a welcoming environment for people with special food related needs
- To encourage our community to honor our commitment to our bodies, sh'mirat ha gof – guarding the body as a gift from God.

To that end, we adopt the following policies:

- No peanuts or tree nuts shall be brought into Kerem Shalom’s kitchen, common spaces or classrooms by any individual or group using Kerem Shalom’s space.
- When food is brought in for Kerem Shalom events, the person who brought the food will be invited to use a form that lists ingredients and food allergens or have the ingredient labels from prepared foods available.
- Volunteers who bring food in for Kerem Shalom communal events will strive to supply healthy foods (low in fat and sugar content).
- Volunteers purchasing food for events will strive to find some alternatives that are free of the major allergens. Some easy alternatives:
 - Nabisco Oreos, Vienna Fingers, Bachman or Rold Gold brand pretzels and Nabisco Graham Crackers have no dairy, egg or nuts
 - Fruit and vegetables are healthy alternatives with no dairy, egg, nut or gluten

(1) Allergies:

There are 8 major allergens and there are known members of Kerem Shalom and the staff who are allergic to them. They are dairy, egg, peanuts, tree nuts, fish, soy, wheat, and gluten. The allergies range in severity to hives and stomach aches to a life threatening reaction, anaphylaxis, which requires immediate medical intervention. Peanut and tree nut allergies in particular are extremely dangerous, because for some, any level of exposure can cause an anaphylactic reaction, shutting off the ability to breathe.

(2) Safety and Responsibility

While we recognize that no space can be 100% safe for those with life threatening allergies, and we make no guarantees or representations to those individuals, we feel it is our responsibility to minimize the risk they encounter when they are at Kerem

Shalom. People with allergies need to remain vigilant about allergens and take responsibility for verifying ingredients before eating.

(3) Food Labeling

The ingredient label below will be part of the invitations to family Shabbat dinners and other related events, and will be available in the kitchen for all food brought in to Kerem Shalom. The ingredient label will be inserted in a small frame and put next to the food. People will be invited to fill out the label. Events that are not open to the Kerem Shalom community (such as a Bar or Bat Mitzvah party) do not need to label, although the nut ban is in effect for all food brought into the kitchen, common areas and classrooms.

(4) Healthy Choices

Jewish food does not have to be unhealthy food. Many of our community members struggle with complex health issues and providing healthy foods from which to choose at any communal event makes these members feel more welcome, benefits us all and is a gift to the next generation. Unhealthy choices (high in sugar and/or fat) should be minimized.

(5) Implementation

If someone brings in food that contains nuts or peanuts, it cannot be served. The item can be removed to the table in the admin wing hallway where it can be picked up after the event. In addition, if students arrive with a snack containing nuts, they will be asked to finish it in the admin wing and staff will supervise clean-up and hand washing. People with nut allergies should be aware that the admin wing may contain nuts. If an item with nuts is left in the refrigerator, it will be removed. Our policy of not serving nuts will be added to the bottom of KSAnnouncements when events with food are included.
